POEM

I find no peace inside me
I gad the darkest places
Pretending to be free
I find my home now here
There and everywhere
And no more am I worried
I keep distancing me from everyone
For I have found my dear none

I am now dwindled by the thoughts of love
The question of family makes me numb
Standing seems vexing to me walking harder
In this narrow followed paths of norms I stagger
He is always out of humour my met say
For the moment I try to laugh
Something takes it away
That I am being nourished by agony
I am oblivious I tend to escape in the world
I find no peace

The moment I close my eyes
I see you in the realm of a dream
I wonder why must I dream
If only to see you
What's in a dream, I wonder?
Shall I sleep if only to be with you
To feel your body and mine intertwined
Your breath fanning my face
Your heartbeat hardening my chest
Your hand crawling all over my body
Your lips leaving an print of wet kisses

What's in a dream, I want to know?

Will it satiate my lust

When your thrusts can not even match

The urgency of my longing

The slippery, sweaty bodies that rival

Our pace like pagans dancing

Under the silvery moon shamelessly beaming

Oh! How I long to hold you

Cuddle and enfold you

While my inner thighs pulsate

With an inexplicable desire

What's in a dream

It never meant to stay

For dreams are dreamers' creation

Expressing hot passion

I love you

You can find many detesting
On one protesting
When men beat women
Nothing has changed for them
Loopholes in the legal and administrative system
Perpetuates the prevailing bad system
Culprit are not punished
Good person who fight for a cause
Behind the bars, they are pushed
Power, position and wealth
Safeguards for erring youth
If you want to bring a change
Fight at all level and age
You may not be able to see the change
But change will come only when you change
